thread embroidery of leaves within straight, narrow lines (created by closely laid diagonal stitches) along the edges of the waistcoat opening, bottom, and collar.

The buttons have edges that are slightly serrated. The collar stands straight, about 1 3/4 inches high. A short and wide revers below the collar is edged with silver embroidery. Two pockets are also embellished with embroidery. The waistcoat back is plain-woven linen (possibly with some cotton) of a rather heavy weight. This same fabric also makes up the lining. Side panels of red twill-woven wool are stitched between the red broadcloth and the backing fabric. To make the garment larger, it was split up the middle of the back, and an insertion of similar cotton fabric was added. The original back ties of the waistcoat are torn off.
