

Title Shoulder Patch

Date 2001

Primary Maker Connecticut Yankee Council

Medium Machine-embroidery in synthetic threads on synthetic or cotton backing, coated with plastic

Description This shoulder patch was worn by Troop 201 at the Connecticut

Yankee Council 2001 National Jamboree. It depicts Jonathan Trumbull, the first governor of Connecticut. There is an American flag on the left side of the patch and a crest with an eagle and American flag motif on the right. The gound of the patch is purple, and it is edged in silver embroidery thread. Connecticut Yankee

Council scouts, leaders, and staff attending the 2001 National Scout Jamboree wore these distinctive council shoulder patches, each designed around the portrait of a famous Connecticut native. Troops made their own name selections and built gateway and Jamboree themes around those people. This set of thirteen patches includes the eleven Jamboree troops, a troop from Westchester Putnam Council, and the Staff shoulder patch, which depicts the 29th

Basic Detail Report

Connecticut Volunteers, an all black regiment that served with distinction during the Civil War. The Connecticut Historical Society participated in finding historically accurate representations, and gained authorization for their use when necessary.

Dimensions Primary Dimensions (height x width): 2 1/4 x 5in. (5.7 x 12.7cm)