labeled "NANCY DUNHAM." and is in the original gold-painted frame (.b). The picture shows six figures, a man, a boy, two women and two girls, surrounding a large monument with an urn on top. All of the figures wear black clothing; the boy also has a blue coat. The faces are visible only on the woman and the boy to the right of the monument. The man stands behind the urn, and the woman and girls to the left of the monument are wearing bonnets and holding up handkerchiefs, so that their faces are covered. A hand-written inscription on the monument reads "Sacred to the Memory/ of Mrs. Lois Dunham, Obt/ August 25th AD 1804 Ae 43 yrs/ I will think of thy Departed Virtues and weep to thy/ Memory."

There are weeping willows in the background. In the far back, at left, is a cluster of buildings, and at right, a small hill. The sky, faces, arms and inscription are hand-painted directly onto the silk ground. The memorial picture is worked inside a round area on a square ground; the ground has a strip of canvas sewn to the top and bottom edges. The picture is behind glass (.c) that is painted black around the embroidered picture; the embroiderer's name is hand-painted in gold at the bottom. The frame (.b, original) consists of one deeply curved band of molding with an applied rope-twist lining the inside of the molding, and has been overpainted with radiator paint. Stitches: The primary stitch on the memorial picture is a satin stitch; it also includes encroaching satin, long and short, outline, daisy, and french knot. Condition: The silk thread has moderate fading. The ground is removed from a stretcher. A small portion of the rope-twist molding is missing from the top left corner of the frame. The paint on the frame is flaking. The backing is replaced.
