Medium Molded cream-colored earthenware

Description Set of six small, cream-colored earthenware plates, a type of ceramic known as creamware. The plates are plain, with the exception of the molded rim, which is divided into six equal sections by a wavy raised line.

Although the plates have the same pattern and maker, they were not all produced at the same time. Plates (.1, .2, .5): These plates appear to be the older half of the set. Each plate has a greenish tint to the glaze and all over crazing.

Basic Detail Report

Each plate has small chips at the rim, and two (.1 and .5) have long hairline cracks. Plates (.3, .4, .6): These plates are the newer additions to the set, having been made in 1927. The plates have no crazing, a cream-colored surface, and only a few small chips at the rim.

Dimensions Primary Dimensions (diameter of each plate): 7 3/8in. (18.7cm)
