Basic Detail Report

Description Map of southeastern New York State, from Albany to New York City; northeastern New Jersey; western Massachusetts; and western Connecticut.

Highways are prominently depicted in black, with a red line marking what is referred to as the Bridge Route, part of which crosses the Hudson River at Bear

Mountain Bridge and continues into Connecticut, where the Hotel Green is located in Danbury. The Goshen Inn is shown on the other side of the route, in Goshen, New York. Six "Trails" are marked with white-on-black numbers: the Bridge Route (1), Lincoln Highway (2), Storm King Highway (3), Yellow Stone

Trail (4), William Penn Highway (9), and Gap Way (19). The road markers used to denote New England interstate and state routes, New Jersey state highways and

depicted are rivers, ponds and lakes. On the back is information about Hotel

Green and the Bear Mountain Bridge.
