

Basic Detail Report

No visit to Connecticut's capital city would be complete without a trip to The Neighborhoods of South Hartford. An international melting pot of cultures, these vibrant neighborhoods, steeped in history, make up the fabric of our livable, diverse city. Here, new cultures are embraced, while the more established ones continue to build and preserve their heritages for generations to come.

Traditional marketplaces, along with dining, shopping and unique historical attractions, bring visitors to this area – where New World meets Old World in a vibrant international melting pot of cultures.

A burst of colors and textures greets visitors inside Pacula Produce, located at 505 Franklin Ave. in South Hartford's "Little Italy" section. This family owned and operated business has been proudly offering the finest produce since 1968.
