(.1) "Eva Rana-Sencilla" - Carved higüera gourd. This design of a goddess is one of the artist's favorites. The unusual border departs from Taino motifs as the artist combines other styles. (.2) "Símbolo Taíno" - Carved higüera gourd. The symbols are taken from rubbings of petroglyphs in Yabucoa discovered in 1996. (.3) "Cuatro Puertorriqueño" - Details of soundbox carvings. Higüera carved with steel tips. Textured with both fine and wide grooves. Decorated with iconography of Puerto Rican cultural influences. (.4) “Cuatro Puertorriqueño”

- Detail of headpiece and crest. (.5) “Cuatro Puertorriqueño” - Details of soundbox carvings. (.6) “Atabey Reina” - The figure of Atabey, with dancing figures around the sides giving a sense of movement. (.7-.8) “Cuatro Puertorriqueño” (.9) “Eva Rana” - Carved higuera (.10) A bordonua, Puerto Rican stringed instrument. (.11-.13) Tiples, Puerto Rican stringed instruments. (.14) “Criatura Taína” - This design uses a central symbol which suggests a baby, while on the sides are playful motifs possibly representing fertilized eggs. (.15)

“Divinidad Feminina” - A depiction of a fertility goddess, with one interpretation of the geometric border designs being the division of cells of a fertilized egg. The artist feels that such geometric designs are charged with energy. (.16) "Ancestral Call: Abuela Criolla" - oil on canvas painting. One of two portraits of the artist's grandmother. This painting reflects the Spanish and Indian roots of her maternal grandmother. (.17) “Abuela Negra” painting - One of two portraits of the artist's grandmother. The artist's paternal grandmother with African roots.
