embroidery, edged with a faggoted and scalloped whitework trim. This same band surrounds the neckline. A 5 1/2-inch-long placket at center front is also trimmed with a scalloped edging of whitework embroidery. It fastens at the top with two studs, as indicated by the opposing buttonholes. The sleeves are cut square under the arm, then folded on the diagonal to create a gusset-like fullness. A 1 3/4-inch-wide strip of lining reinforces the armhole. The front and back panels of the chemise are gathered into the band surrounding the neckline.

They are pieced with triangles at the side seams to create the desired width. The hem is one inch deep. Seams are selvage-to-selvage or flat felled.
