inch of the jar, which is left unglazed. The jar has a flat base and sides that swell then narrow to form a narrow neck and a slightly flared rim. A narrow ledge circles the inside of the jar and would have supported a lid (now missing). There are several imperfections in the glaze where the redware is uneven, where the glaze was interrupted during firing, or where the glaze did not cover the redware. Light scratches circle the widest point of the exterior of the jar.
