Description Views of exterior and interior of a large brick Romanesque revival prison building with barred windows, a tower, paved driveways, grassy lawns, and an American flag flying from a pole. A back wing of the building has a smokestack and a sign that reads "Bridgeport Stone Co." Workmen, possibly prisoners, haul stone on a truck pulled by a tractor. In an interior, men, including some who appear to be African-American, stand at work benches, working on what appear to be metal castings.
