

Basic Detail Report

Title Mouth of the Connecticut River

Date 1861

Primary Maker Henry C. Arnold

Medium Oil and gouache on canvas in passepartout wood frame

Description The pleasure sailing vessel, VENI VICI, is under sail at the mouth of the Connecticut River at Saybrook (now Old Saybrook), sailing into Long Island Sound. Two other views of the same vessel are seen along the shore at right. Birds and jumping bluefish are visible in the immediate foreground. To the left of the vessel is a lighthouse, Lynde Point Light, on the Saybrook shore. A carriage is visible on the beach. Several buildings and masts of sailing vessels are visible beyond the lighthouse, in the harbor area of North Cove. To the right of the vessel is the Old Lyme shore. A Shoreline Railroad passenger train, buildings and a tall signal tower for the railroad ferry are visible. The brick building on the river bank is the railroad ferry landing on the Old Lyme shore;

Basic Detail Report

the corresponding terminal and signal tower on the Saybrook side are not visible. On the back is an eagle holding a banner with the artist's signature.

Dimensions Primary Dimensions (image height x width): 23 7/8 x 35 3/4in. (60.6 x 90.8cm) Frame (height x width x depth): 27 3/4 x 38 7/8 x 3/4in. (70.5 x 98.7 x 1.9 cm)