Description View from above of Cheney Brothers Mills next to train tracks. On the left there are three large, rectangular mill buildings standing next to each other. A railroad track runs directly in front of the buildings. There are utility poles along the track, mostly on the far side of it. The ones on the far side are connected together with wires or cables. On the far right there is a dirt road that intersects with the railroad tracks in the foreground. The other end of the road disappears into a thick clump of trees.
