

The image shows a historical document, possibly a book cover or endpaper, featuring a collection of circular and diamond-shaped tokens arranged in rows. The tokens are made of various materials, including wood, metal, and paper, and many contain text or symbols. At the top, there are several diamond-shaped tokens with blue backgrounds and white text, such as "I pray thee, cease thy quarrel," "May your souls approve," "Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway," "Thou wert born a fool," "In time we hate that which we often fear," "Mercy let murders punishing those that kill," "The flower that smiles on all," "We must take the current when it serves," "My griefs cry louder than advertisement," "Incense burns not evil," "I pray thee, cease thy quarrel," "Pardon is still the surest second-ry," "Mercy is kinder itself, than our soft looks seem," "Let your quarrels look on faults," "I pray thee, cease thy quarrel," "Believe," "Friendship," "Excuse," and "I mean well." Below these are several circular tokens, some with intricate designs and others with plain colors like red, black, and blue. In the center, there is a small rectangular piece of paper with the word "BELIEVE" written on it. To the right of the central piece, there is a small diamond-shaped token with the word "Friendship" and another with the words "I mean well." Below the tokens, there is a handwritten date "Albany 12 August 1799" and a name "Jacob Morris Esquire". At the bottom left, the number "24" is written. The entire arrangement is set against a light-colored, textured background.
