

Basic Detail Report

Title Interview with Elizabeth B. Leete

Date 2016 December 8

Primary Maker Elizabeth B. Leete

Description Oral history interview with Elizabeth B. Leete who was interviewed by Ann H. Rubin on December 8, 2016 for the Connecticut Bar Foundation's

History of Connecticut Women in the Legal Profession Project. Topics Discussed:

- Early Life : Elizabeth B. Leete grew up in Louisville, Kentucky. Her father was a newspaper general manager, and her mother was a volunteer for the League of Women Voters and the United Nations. - Early Career: Elizabeth attended Wellesley College, majoring in history. After marrying Harmon Leete, who attended Harvard Law School, she worked for the Christian Science Monitor and a public relations firm in Boston. Upon returning to Hartford, she worked at The Hartford Courant in the Circulation Department and then wrote for a column called "Shopping with Jacqueline." After retiring from the newspaper, she did freelance writing and became active in Black Sash. - Law School: Elizabeth decided to go to law school, influenced by her friend Shelagh O'Neill and the Mountain Laurel decision in New Jersey. Elizabeth attended the University of Connecticut School of Law starting in 1972. She had a summer internship with Neighborhood Legal Services and later worked at Connecticut General as a legal intern. - First Jobs: Elizabeth took the bar exam the summer after law school and later became a bar examiner. Her first job was clerking for Justice Alva Loiselle at the Connecticut Supreme Court. She then accepted a position at Ribicoff and

Basic Detail Report

Kotkin. - Formation of First Women-Owned Law Firm: In 1980, Elizabeth, along with Shelagh O'Neill and Gale Kosto, formed their own all-women law firm, Leete, O'Neill and Kosto, which became the largest all-woman firm in Connecticut at the time. - Immigration Law: Around 1990, the firm, Leete, O'Neill and Kosto, shifted its primary focus to immigration law. - Evolution of the Firm :

The firm is currently named Leete, Kosto and Wizner. The firm remains small. -

Women in the Legal Profession: Elizabeth observed significant changes for women in the legal profession over time, crediting "groundbreakers" like Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Sandra Day O'Connor for changing the world.

Dimensions Duration: 9 Minutes, 19 Seconds