Description Audio file of interview with Jasmine Huff. She was interviewed by Mayo Negron on 11 July 2025 in Hartford, Connecticut. Jasmine Huff was interviewed as part of the Connecticut Museum of Culture and History's Community History Project discussing moments of change in her life. Jasmine is a 30-year-old librarian from Connecticut and a new mother to her son Elliot, who is a calm and joyful baby. She spoke about immense changes that have shaped her recent years including becoming a parent, undergoing major surgery, supporting a parent through cancer, and getting married. Jasmine emphasized the emotional weight of these experiences, yet also the strength and resilience she discovered in herself while navigating through life. Jasmine reflected on how motherhood has shifted her identity and daily life and presented both joyful and difficult moments including changes in her health, routines, and time. Jasmine also shared how this change brought her a new form of clarity to her relationship with those around her. She now prioritizes meaningful connections and boundaries. Her support from her husband, friends, and family has kept her strong throughout the ordeal. Jasmine discusses her first day of work at the library. She shares her perspective about how libraries are evolving with new technology like 3D printers and makerspaces. Jasmine believes the heart of the library hasn't changed and it's a place where anyone can learn, no matter
