Description Woman's underwear set, consisting of drawers (.a), chemise (.b), and nightgown (.c), made of white cotton. Split drawers: The bottoms of the legs are decorated with two rows of ruching alternating with two bands of whitework embroidery. A lightly gathered edging of whitework embroidery finishes the bottom. The legs are each gathered into the two-inch-wide waistband, which closes on the left side with a single white glass button. Chemise: A one-inch-wide band of whitework embroidery defines the wide neckline; it is edged with scalloped whitework. There is an 8- x 10 1/2-inch flap set below the neckline at center front; it is made by alternating strips of ruched self-fabric and whitework embroidery, edged with scalloped embroidery. The front and back panels of the chemise are gathered into the neckband. The sleeves are short (5 1/2 inches) and are gathered into the neckband and into a band of embroidery around the opening. Underarm gussets provide ease, and strips of self-fabric line the armhole for reinforcement. The hem is 2 1/4 inches deep. Nightgown: A deep yoke made of alternating bands of ruched self-fabric and whitework embroidery covers the chest and back of the shoulders. The neckline is high and round, and finished with a scalloped edging of whitework; small triangles of whitework set on either side of the center front opening simulate a collar. The nightgown's opening extends from the neck to the hem; it fastens with mother of pearl buttons under a whitework placket. The opening is edged for its entire length on each side with a band of gathered self-fabric and scalloped embroidery. The shoulder is dropped; the armholes are piped. The long sleeves are slightly gathered at the top of the armhole; the wrist openings are decorated with alternating bands of whitework and ruching simulating a cuff on the outside of the arm. The hem is about three inches wide.
