Title Infant's Bathrobe

Date about 1930-1960

Primary Maker Battalino family

Medium Machine-stitched cotton, with machine-embroidered rayon

Description Infant's bathrobe of soft, white cotton flannel. The robe is constructed of a rectangle of fabric, with the narrow ends folded to the center front, where they overlap. The armholes, shoulderline, and rounded neckline are cut out of the top edge. The sleeves are about six inches long, and they are seamed along the top of the arm. All edges are finished with pale pink rayon thread, machine-stitched in a fan-like pattern. There is a buttonhole stitched at the top of the right front, indicating that the opening originally fastened with a button. A diamond of self-fabric is zig-zag stitched in pink thread over the proper right breast.

Dimensions Primary Dimensions (length x width with arms outstretched): 17 1/2 x 23 1/2in. (44.5 x 59.7cm)
