Date 20th century

Primary Maker Alfred Johnson

Medium wool; leather; brass; cotton; satin

Description A wool guard's uniform for the Seth Thomas Clock Company worn by Alfred Johnson. Uniform includes an overcoat, jacket, shirt, hat, and belt. The uniform was made by Magson Uniform Company of New Britain, Conn. The buttons on the overcoat, coat, and shirt were manufactured by J. R. Gaunt & Son of England. (a) The overcoat is a black wool double-breasted coat. Five sets of gold buttons down the front for closure. Standard collar and peaked lapels. Each arm has a shoulder patch for the Seth Thomas Clock Co. in the shape of a shield with gold embroidery. The patch has the initials "S. T." Two pockets at the waist that open through the coat allowing the wearer to access their trouser pockets. Extends below the knee. Half belt in the back. On the left breast is a piece of metal, which would have held a name identification tag. Pocket on interior of left breast. Top half of overcoat interior is satin fabric and the bottom half is wool. Slit on bottom of overcoat in the back, which can be closed together using two black buttons. (b) The jacket is black with the same shoulder patches on each arm as the overcoat. Notched collar with square corners on the lapel and collar. Four gold buttons down the front for closure inscribed with a "P" in the center, which is surrounded by a laurel wreath. Four fake pockets on the front, two on each side with a single button closure. There is a metal piece on
