Medium Molded cream-colored earthenware

Description Set of six small, cream-colored earthenware plates, a type of ceramic known as creamware. The plates are plain, with the exception of the molded rim, which is divided into six equal sections by a wavy raised line.

Although the plates have the same pattern and maker, they were not all produced at the same time. Plates (.1, .2, .5): These plates appear to be the older half of the set. Each plate has a greenish tint to the glaze and all over crazing.

Each plate has small chips at the rim, and two (.1 and .5) have long hairline cracks. Plates (.3, .4, .6): These plates are the newer additions to the set, having been made in 1927. The plates have no crazing, a cream-colored surface, and only a few small chips at the rim.

Dimensions Primary Dimensions (diameter of each plate): 7 3/8in. (18.7cm)
