

Basic Detail Report

Title Curtis Veeder, Inventor of the Cyclometer, Riding a Bicycle

Date 1947

Medium Drawing; ink and gouache with graphite on white wove paper mounted to board

Description Drawing of several men and women riding bicycles down a small path or road. The man at the front of the line may be meant to represent Curtis Veeder, inventor of the cyclometer. Most of the people are wearing hats, the men appear to be wearing knickers, and women are wearing long skirts. One man in the background is riding an Ordinary bicycle.

Dimensions Primary Dimensions (height x width): 21 7/8 x 14 15/16in. (55.6 x 37.9 cm)