Medium Lithography; black printer's ink on paper, mounted on mat board

Description Pictorial map of New London County, Connecticut, with the names of its towns, their dates of settlement and incorporation, and small drawings of notable landmarks or events. The cartouche contains the city of New London's seal, depicting a three-masted ship, sails unfurled, with a banner above it with the Latin phrase, "Mare liberum," or "The freedom of the sea." To the left is an eight-point compass rose. The map is bordered on the right and left sides with a series of small drawings, presumably related to New London's history: a stalk of corn, a leaf, a bow, an arrowhead, a candle, a book, and more.
