Stave and Sondra Astor Stave at the home of Mr. Blawie's mother in East Hartford, Connecticut. Bruce Blawie was born on February 12, 1948 in Bridgeport, Connecticut. His father got a job at Pratt & Whitney, so the family moved to Cleveland Avenue in the North End of Hartford. His father was able to purchase a house in East Hartford with a G.I. Bill loan. His mother, Roslyn Blawie, and aunt, Mae, worked at G. Fox & Company. At age 16, one of Bruce's first jobs at G. Fox was turning on the air conditioners on each floor and cleaning the air filters, as well as other maintenance tasks. He was trained by the more experienced staff in the Maintenance Department, so when a plumbing issue arose, Bruce would tag along with the more senior staffer. Bruce remembers seeing water marks on the basement walls from the 1938 Hurricane and 1955 Flood. He then worked in Daytime Dresses in the Ladies Department. He worked at G. Fox for two years. He describes his interactions with Beatrice Fox Auerbach.
