appears to be wearing partial body armor is seated on trunks or boxes in the right foreground. Another young man leans on the boxes. Other men carry similar boxes up a slope in the right background. A boat and three three-masted ships are in the distance. Three buildings with tall chimneys are at the left. One building has a ladder leaning against it and what may be intended for scaffolding beside it. Additional trees are in the background.
