Description A color lithograph of the Rogers & Brother silver factory in Waterbury, Conn. drawn by R. Caughey. The factory and additional buildings are featured in the center of the image. The Rogers & Brother sign can clearly be read on the main building in the center. There is a river on both sides of the manufacturing complex. In the bottom right corner, a train is driving by the river. By the train is a bridge over the river and two women are crossing over the brdige towards the factory. A horse and carriage is in the factory complex in front of the main building. Three smokestacks in the background of the image with smoke flying towards the right side. The print has a wide cream colored border. Evidence of the print being torn out of a book because the top edge has remnants of binding and tears along the edge.
