Description Audio file of interview with Mark Lamoureux. He was interviewed by Robert P Terentieff on April 9, 2026 in Bridgeport, Connecticut. Mark Lamoureux was interviewed as part of the Connecticut Museum of Culture and History's Community History Project discussing moments of change in his life. In this interview, Professor Mark Lamoureux shares his experiences as a writer, educator, and parent, discussing how these roles have influenced his personal and professional life. Lamoureux explores the concept of change, describing the birth of his daughter as a transformative event that shifted his focus from achieving external success as a writer to valuing his role as a parent. He reflects on his graduate school experience, questioning the practicality and impact of MFA programs on writing careers. He emphasizes the importance of internal validation over traditional success measures and discusses how teaching has informed his parenting approach and vice versa. His evolving creative interests now include visual arts and photography, which are areas where he feels renewed enthusiasm and freedom from established communities.
